MSPC Decisions Affecting North America Operations—No. 6

Notification to Field: 26 February 2014

Item 1: AEC Design Guidelines—Update

The Architecture, Engineering and Construction Division has the responsibility to provide and maintain Architecture, Engineering and Construction Design Guidelines (United States and Canada), which focus on requirements unique to Church meetinghouse and other facilities, and convey the owner's preference, intent, and standards. They are used by consulting architects, engineers and landscape architects who provide professional services for the Church, and also by project managers and facilities managers, as the Design Guidelines establish the standard for facility function, materials and systems.

The Design Guidelines have been updated, and a modified version was posted on the AEC website with a release date of December 20, 2013. A significant modification to the Design Guidelines is the inclusion of subsections in each chapter providing guidelines for “Historic Properties.” There are more than 180 “Historic Properties” approved by the Presiding Bishopric and deemed to have unusual historical, architectural or aesthetic significance. These facilities are considered valuable assets worth the cost to maintain, and when necessary, to renovate and improve. Prior to scoping or executing any work on these facilities, please refer to the appropriate “Historic Properties” subsections now included in the Design Guidelines for guidance and direction.

Facilities managers should be aware of which buildings under their stewardship are on the Historic Properties list. Although the majority of buildings so designated are in Utah, there are 18 other states and two provinces that have buildings, in some cases multiple buildings, which have been given “Historic Property” designation. Attached is a listing of these buildings. It includes buildings in four categories:

1. Temples: Temples of Church-wide historical and architectural influence.
2. Landmark Properties: Tabernacles, meetinghouses, and other buildings of Church-wide significance which exhibit the highest historical, architectural, or aesthetic value.
3. Register Properties: Buildings, or area, regional, state or provincial, or local significance which contain major historical, architectural, or aesthetic value.
4. Stewardship Properties: Buildings which are architecturally significant, but which were not built by the Church. They are treated just like Register Properties.

Some of these properties have a “*Historic” designation in FMAT, but not all. While this designation is being added where it does not currently exist, facilities managers and project managers should make note of buildings for which they have stewardship which are on the Historic Properties Program list.
